In Judging
a Bank

Always remember that it is Capital and Surplus that give security to the depositor. Capital and Surplus stand between the depositor and any possible loss of shrinkage in the securities held by the bank. The Capital and Surplus of this bank amount to $260,000.00, a margin of safety that assures absolute security for every dollar entrusted to us.

BIG SHOW IN CHICAGO
IS OPENED

D. Hillel whose gavel banged to order the Republican convocation, at noon precisely. Hours before that minute the great galleries of the Coliseum had been packed to their utmost capacity.

A band, tucked far up above in a gallery, tooted cheerfully away at the popular airs of the day and kept the waiting thousands in good humor.

On the floor, where standards bearing the names of the states marked off the space reserved for the actual participants in this quadrennial festivity, the delegates were slower to arrive.

There was a constant roar of noise from the floor and the galleries, the buzzing of thousands of voices blended into one indescribable medley. This bedlam of confusion and talk and stamping of feet and whispering and shouting rolled up to the speaker's platform like a giant wave. The noise of eight thousand sets of vocal chords must be heard to be understood; words can't convey the impression.

The delegates, all alive to their own importance and wearing vivid badges proclaiming their right to have a voice in selecting the Republican standard bearers, strolled in in groups and squads and companies. They clustered about in little knots, buzzing away with the ever-unchanging gossip of a national meeting.

On the speaker's platform the officers of the convention were holding the little conferences that really amounted to something.

Then came Charles D. Hillel. There was a vociferous outburst, a sort of tidal wave of noise that dashed against the platform and finally subsided in what would have been merely the murmurs of expectation from the audience blended together, made a fairly creditable amount of noise.

Finally, BANG! went the gavel. (Gavel by courtesy, he it understood, since it was really a gigantic mallet, the only kind whose staccato raps could be expected to penetrate the convention noise).

Chairman Hillel called the convention to order.

The noise subsided a little. There were more BANGS and HIFFS and ultimately a semblance of order was obtained and the Republican convention of 1916 was in session.

Over in the Auditorium, very much the same scenes were being enacted, on a slightly smaller scale. The Auditorium was likewise packed, but it wasn't nearly so large a hall as the Coliseum and its theater-like proportions didn't create the impression of vastness such as struck the onlooker on entering the barn-like interior of the Republican meeting place.

The Progressive convocation was more mixed, also. There were women delegates. But there was the same noise and clatter and enthusiasm.

The fiery red head of National Chairman Victor Mardock moved comelike on the stage.

"Original Roosevelt men"—and women—renewed their fealty to the Sage of Sagamore Hill in cheers, in impromptu conferences, in all sorts of badges and ribbons.
